Mr. Allen W. Dulles, Director,
Central Intelligence Agency,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Dulles:

STAT [redacted] asks me to thank you for your consideration of his interest in a position with your office.

As a matter of mutual interest, you may have noted in last Friday's New York Times that Gen. Telford Taylor went off the deep end at West Point in attacking the investigating techniques currently being used by certain gentry in Congress. We have been directed to forward a copy of the speech to the senatorial committee concerned. No copy exists; it was an ad lib job which in fact hit much harder than the newspaper account indicated. I would not be surprised to find myself in the witness box before long, even though I have suggested that Gen. Taylor is the proper witness. That is precisely what he earnestly desires to become.

Sincerely yours,
